

ear

Can you write your own short story using as many 'air' sound words as you can?

THE HAIRY BEAR

Once upon a time in a land far away there lived a bear called Bear. He was not just any bear, he was by far the bear with the most hair you have ever seen! He was really sad because the other bears used to climb the stairs when he was asleep in bed and shout, "Beware the Hairy Bear!" Poor Bear used to rush downstairs but they had long gone, it was so unfair.

One day Bear carefully got dressed and glared at himself in the mirror. He was so hairy, it just wasn't fair. He went to catch a bus and he paid Mr. Hare, the bus driver, his fare and sat down. There was a very pretty fair-haired girl next to him, and she smiled at Bear. Soon they got talking and Bear told her all his troubles and how people always stare at his hair. The girl said, "I will give you this letter. When I have gone, tear open the letter and prepare to be surprised!"

After the girl left, Bear opened the letter. He almost fell off his chair as inside the letter was a square shaped bit of paper, and it said, "You have just seen a fairy but don't be scared. You can have one wish..." Of course we all know what the bear wished for, don't we?

The next day, the hairy bear woke up to find he wasn't hairy at all anymore. He was just beautifully smooth like the skin of a pear.

air

ear

are

ere